Bollinger's Gas Station Brings E85 to St. Petersburg Auto service station and Protec Fuel team up

BOCA RATON, Fla. – - Bollinger's Gas Station is allowing St. Petersburg, Fla., flex-fuel vehicle drivers to fill up with E85 fuel for the first time in their city. The station, which opened its E85 sales today, is located in the heart of St. Petersburg on Tyrone Blvd. The business, specializing in auto repair with Bollinger's Auto Service, partnered with Protec Fuel to install its first E85 station.

"The more I learned about E85, the more aggressive I became on offering it," said Ted Bollinger, owner. "It just made sense – offer a product that's good for the environment and the U.S. economy, and at the same time help my conscious customers, as well as hopefully my own business."

Protec Fuel, based in Florida, has partnered with Bollinger's to manage the E85 installation and provide fuel for the company's new greener burning fuel offering. Protec is a turnkey E85 company specializing in station conversions and fuel distribution. Flex-fuel vehicles can run on E85 and gasoline. E85 is a blend of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline for flex-fuel vehicles.

"We thank Bollinger's for letting us help them provide this part of Florida with a cleaner-burning option," said Steve Walk, an Executive Director of Protec Fuel. "They are offering a fuel nobody else in the area is, which will help them stand out while helping the environment," he said.

Because of its core business, Bollinger's also offers conversions for gas-engine vehicles to become flex-fuel vehicles. They want to focus on the area's fleets. They offer three types of fuel: gasoline, diesel and E85. They also offer a unique "retro" feel, with vintage-look pumps.

Besides E85 selling at a discount to conventional gasoline, it is better for the environment and supports our U.S. and local economies. Visit
